

Kate is the friendly scheduling assistant for our dealer partners. When a customer's vehicle needs service, Kate reaches out, helps them pick a time, reminds them the day before, and follows up after the appointment. She works over voice or SMS, whichever the customer prefers.

Where the work begins — Triggers

A new case opens when something tells us a vehicle needs attention. The three trigger sources:

RECALL

A manufacturer recall applies to one of the dealer's vehicles.

DTC

The vehicle's onboard diagnostic system flags a fault code that needs attention.

REGULAR MAINTENANCE DUE

Scheduled service is coming up based on time, mileage, or manufacturer interval.

Triggers go into a queue. We work one case per customer at a time — if a customer already has an open case, any new trigger for them waits its turn.

The main path — what a happy case looks like

How a case can end

YES Booked & serviced

Customer agreed, came in, got serviced. We close the case after a feedback note.

NO Customer declined

The customer says no — at any step. We thank them and close the case. We don't reach out again about this same issue.

MAYBE No firm answer

The customer engaged but didn't commit. We give them 24 hours, then try once more. If still no firm answer, we close the case.

SILENT No response at all

For SMS, we wait 24 hours, send one more message, then close after another 24 hours of silence (48 hours total).

RESCHEDULE Customer wants a different time

At the reminder, or any time before the appointment, the customer can ask to move it. We pick a new slot under the same case and reset the reminder for the new date.

CANCELLED Customer cancels the appointment

If the customer cancels outright (not a reschedule), we treat it as a decline and close the case.

NO-SHOW Vehicle didn't arrive

Our GPS sees no arrival at the dealership during the appointment window. Case closes. (No automatic reach-back, today.)

How Kate uses voice and SMS

The customer chooses the channel

Each customer has a preferred way to be reached — voice or SMS. Kate uses that channel for the booking conversation.

Voice gets one phone call

If Kate calls and the conversation doesn't land in a clear yes or no, the rest of the case continues over SMS. We never call a second time.

Reminders, arrival check, and feedback are always SMS — they're short, async, and respectful of people's time.

Timing at a glance

MOMENT	WHAT HAPPENS
Trigger	Case opens; Kate reaches out within minutes.
+24 hours of silence	One nudge.
+48 hours of silence	Case closes (timed out).
24 hours before appointment	Reminder sent.
Appointment day	GPS confirms arrival (or absence) at the dealership.
After appointment	Feedback ask. One nudge after 24 hours, then close.

This describes the customer-facing flow. Operations team has additional dashboards for queue depth, case state, and channel mix.